Hot 100 Barristers 2019 People

Amy Rogers, 11KBW

Called in 2007, Amy Rogers has built up a reputation as one of the most sought-after juniors at the Bar for complex commercial litigation. She has been acting for Iranian bank Mellat in a decade-long legal battle over sanctions imposed by the Treasury in 2009.

The bank successfully claimed in the Supreme Court that the sanctions were unlawful and is seeking damages of $4bn (£3.2bn) – the largest claim made against HM Treasury. The case is relisted for 2019 to determine damages.

In an equally long-running and high-profile case, Rogers won for a group of former AIG employees over breach-of-contract claims in relation to £100m of unpaid bonuses following the bailout of AIG in 2008. The damages trial is also set for 2019. Other highlights of Rogers' work in 2018 included acting for Deliveroo to determine if it should be required to recognise a trade union, and the group litigation against the Government in the solar PV sector.
