
Andrew Smith

Andrew practises in the fields of employment and discrimination law, sports law and commercial law.

His employment practice encompasses complex and high value disputes in the Employment Tribunal, EAT, High Court and Court of Appeal. He is regularly instructed to appear in lengthy whistleblowing discrimination and whistleblowing trials, as well as commercial employment matters. He has recently appeared in the Court of Appeal in the high profile employment cases of Smith v Pimlico Plumbers, Kong v Gulf International Bank and Mackenzie v AA.

Andrew's domestic sports law practice includes arbitrations and disciplinary proceedings. In addition to his work as an advocate, Andrew has experience of sitting as an arbitrator, an appeal board member and an independent investigator. In terms of his international practice, Andrew has worked on several cases in the Court of Arbitration for Sport and the Basketball Arbitral Tribunal.

Andrew is ranked by the legal directories as a leading junior barrister in both employment and sports law. The most recent editions describe him as someone who “immediately inspires confidence and puts the client at ease”, “quickly gets to grips with large and complex cases” and is a “very strong courtroom advocate” and “brilliant”. Other recommendations may be viewed below.

Specialisms

Employment

Andrew appears regularly in the ET, EAT and High Court in complex and high value employment claims. In 2019 he was shortlisted by Legal 500 for employment junior of the year.

The cases in which Andrew is instructed commonly involve claims of discrimination and/or whistleblowing. He has substantial experience of appearing as the sole advocate in lengthy ET hearings. Andrew also has particular expertise in disputes concerning employment status, TUPE, agency workers and holiday pay (amongst others).

Andrew has appeared in the Court of Appeal in the high profile employment cases of:

- Smith v Pimlico Plumbers [2022] IRLR 347, concerning the nature and extent of ‘carry over’ rights in respect of annual leave;
- Kong v Gulf International Bank [2022] IRLR 854, concerning the ‘separability principle’ and its application to claims of automatically unfair dismissal because of whistleblowing; and
- Mackenzie v AA [2022] IRLR 985, concerning the application of the ‘least burdensome’ performance rule in assessing damages for wrongful dismissal.

Andrew's High Court practice encompasses a broad range of employment-related litigation, including ‘team move’ cases and disputes concerning restrictive covenants, bonus payments, obligations of confidence and fiduciary duties.

Andrew is regularly instructed to act in sports arbitrations, disciplinary and other proceedings (including before the PFCC), acting for a wide range of clients including players, athletes, managers, officials, clubs, intermediaries / agents and governing bodies.

In addition to his work as an advocate, Andrew has been appointed to sit as a Rule K arbitrator and as a member of an EFL arbitration appeal panel. Andrew is a member of Sport Resolutions' panel of arbitrators and its panel of pro bono advocates.

Andrew was also appointed by a major sports governing body to conduct an independent grievance investigation arising out of a disputed selection decision for the Olympic Games.

In terms of international work, Andrew has been involved in several cases before the Court of Arbitration for Sport, as well as claims in the Basketball Arbitral Tribunal. Andrew's CAS experience includes being appointed as an ad hoc clerk in the high-profile doping appeals brought by 39 Russian athletes in connection with the Sochi Winter Olympics.

Andrew is a long-established member of the LawInSport editorial board, has written many articles for the website, and acts as a Judge in the annual Sports Law Arbitration Moot competition.

Andrew also co-authored three chapters of 'Football and the Law' (Bloomsbury Professional), covering the topics of (i) football institutions, (ii) ownership issues, and (iii) arbitration in football.

Commercial

Andrew's civil litigation practice involves him representing and advising clients on a broad range of commercial matters, often with an employment element. His commercial arbitration experience includes complex disputes concerning agency fees/commission payments, joint venture arrangements and start-up businesses. As well as LCIA arbitrations, Andrew has experience of proceedings in the International Court of Arbitration, in which he acted for a foreign government in its defence of a high value commercial claim.

Andrew is an ADR Group Accredited Civil & Commercial Mediator.
