Anya has a broad practice spanning privacy, media, technology, public, sports and employment law. In recognition of her work as a leading media and privacy specialist, Anya was named "Media, Defamation, Privacy and Data Protection Silk of the Year" in the 2021 Chambers & Partners Bar Awards. Anya is named as a Leading Silk in the directories in recognition of her work in the privacy, media and employment spheres. She is listed as a "Star Individual" in Chambers & Partners in recognition of her leading role the data privacy field, and is also recognised as leading silk in the field of data privacy class actions. Anya was also named in the Lawyer's "Hot 100 Lawyers 2019". Anya has a special interest in technology disputes and has acted across a wide array of cutting-edge technology-based cases, in the regulatory and civil litigation spheres, and also before the Administrative Court. Anya's current cases range from very large-scale data privacy class actions; to heavy and publicly important regulatory cases fought before the First-Tier and Upper Tribunals; to weighty judicial reviews involving matters such as the application of the Broadcasting Code and the legality of the police's use of live facial recognition; to appellate cases raising significant public interest issues, such as the application of anonymity principles in cases involving children and the application of GDPR principles to advertising practices. Anya has been described in the directories as a "phenomenal advocate and a brilliant legal brain" as someone who is "devastating in cross-examination", "a first rate team leader" and "a real star".

Expertise

Privacy & Media

Anya is widely recognised as a leading privacy and media practitioner. Anya was named Defamation/Privacy Silk of the Year in the 2021 Chambers & Partners UK Bar Awards The Lawyer listed Anya in its "Hot 100 Lawyers 2019", recognizing her role 'at the vanguard' of cutting-edge privacy litigation. Anya is recognised as a "Star Individual" for her work in the data privacy field in Chambers & Partners, which describes her as taking a leading role in many of the practice area's most prominent cases, tackling critical disputes in relation to subjects including data breaches, subject access disclosure and the right to be forgotten'. The Legal 500 equally identifies Anya as a Tier 1 'Leading Silk' for her work in the data privacy field. Anya co-founded 11KBW's highly regarded information law blog: panopticonblog.com.

Large scale data cases/class actions – Anya has extensive experience of advising and acting for controllers (on both the regulatory and civil litigation sides) in cases involving large-scale personal data incidents/issues, often with an international element. She routinely leads cases for controllers in very large scale data privacy class actions, helping them to manage their global strategy, as well as assisting them with their dealings with regulators, including the ICO. Anya has a particular interest in online data processing, and she regularly advises and acts for large-scale online service providers, including social media platforms.

> She is one of the founders of modern data protection litigation, be that anything from mass claims to regulatory investigations, there is nothing she has not seen, done or established the law on.
