Nigel Giffin practises mainly in the field of public law at 11KBW, although he still undertakes employment law and commercial law cases of certain kinds. His practice covers commercial and environmental judicial review, as well as many aspects of local government law including education, social services, housing, powers and finance and elections. He was formerly a member of the Attorney General's "A" panel of Counsel to the Crown, and undertook a number of important Human Rights Act cases in this capacity.

He is a CEDR accredited mediator, and has undertaken a number of mediations as both mediator and counsel.

Nigel studied law at Oxford, where he was awarded a first in his degree. He is the author of the chapter on Administrative Court proceedings in Foskett's Law and Practice of Compromise, and a member of the editorial board of Butterworths Local Government Reports.

Nigel has recently been acting as counsel to the Public Inquiry into the murder of Zahid Mubarek at Feltham Young Offenders' Institution.

On sensitive and complex legal issues, Nigel is very prompt, skilled and thorough. He supports the clients to make effective decisions.

Expertise

Local Government

Nigel Giffin KC has practised in local government law for 25 years. He undertakes this work as part of a broadly based public law, public procurement law and human rights practice, in the course of which he appears at all levels of courts and tribunals, including a large number of cases in the Supreme Court, House of Lords and Court of Appeal.

Nigel's clients include:

- Local authorities – he has acted for and advised a high proportion of county councils, London borough councils and other unitary authorities, and many district councils, in all parts of England and Wales, as well as authorities in Northern Ireland.
- Joint authorities and joint committees.
- Fire and rescue authorities and police authorities.
- Those dealing with local authorities, including service users, trade unions, contractors, joint venture partners, individual councillors, local government employees, regional development agencies and other statutory bodies, and central government departments.

Nigel's practice includes both a substantial volume of advisory work, and advocacy in litigation. He is a member of the editorial board of Butterworths Local Government Reports.

His particular areas of experience and expertise include the following.

Local government powers and finance

Nigel has regularly advised in this area for many years, dealing for example with:

- General powers under the Local Government Act 1972 and the Local Government Act 2000
- Charging and trading powers under the Local Authorities (Goods and Services) Act 1970 and the Local Government Act 2003, including the interface with public procurement law
- Local Government (Contracts) Act 1997 and powers to undertake PFI schemes and other major projects

Nigel is excellent at getting into the detail of complex and sometimes esoteric areas of law, and is a real expert across local government.
